Excerpt from Days of a Soldier's Life: Being Letters Written by the Late General Sir C. P. Beauchamp Walker, K. C. B., During Active Service in the Crimean, Chinese, Austro-Prussian (66), And Franco-German (70-71) Wars Melita, let me give you this advice, never under any circumstances but necessity, be tempted to undertake a voyage in a screw; the noise, the motion and rolling, are enough to destroy all one's philosophy. Having said this, I will dilate no more on disagreeables, but proceed to tell you that I and the beasts are remarkably well, Punch best, then Jemrny, and Sultan rather middling, with a bad cold. We have only lost one horse, a mare of Lord Lucan's, which died of fright and seasickness on Thursday morning, though. We have had a very rough passage, and till to-day a very heavy roll of the ship day and night. We made a very good start, and got on capitally till Wednesday morning, but after 12 o'clock of that day till 11 am. On Friday I can tell you nothing, save that I...
