Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . The Dental Practitioner and Advertiser is a quarterly journal devoted to the advancement of the dental profession and the education of dental and orthodontic practitioners. The editor for this volume is W. C. Barrett M.D. D. D. S., and the text was published by the Buffalo Dental Manufacturing Co. of Buffalo, New York. Unlike other similar publications, this book contains both original content written exclusively for the journal and reprinted information that the reader might not have access to and would potentially find resourceful and educational. The majority of the essays written for the advertiser are editorial in style and written by practitioners in the field of dentistry on their personal experiences, dental policies, and dental practices. Articles like Our Terminology, Root Canals, Some Points In the Structure and Development of Dentine, The Dentition of Animals, and The Function of the Schools are all aimed at fellow professionals and serve as hallmarks of professionalism. The publication also covers news that was current at the point of printing with articles written by a wide range of authors covering an expansive range of information about dentistry across the world including special segments written on Niagara, Buffalo, Kansas, Michigan, Rome, New York, and Great Britain. The quarterly journal, The Dental Practitioner and Advertiser, is a wonderful resource for the dental enthusiast with any level of background in the field. This publication provides a multitude of informative and entertaining articles about dentistry for the discerning reader, as well as passionate and well-researched essays written from dental professionals to their peers in the hopes of communicating vital information in dental policy, practice, and research. In addition to the vast array of quality and engaging articles and essays, this...
